Dear Mr. Lawson,

This will confirm my previous discussions with Mr. Henry Berger. The date of February 9, which he says is preferable to you, is satisfactory to me.

I can be (and expect to be) in Burlington well in advance of the 8 p.m. time of the meeting. At the moment I have not made travel arrangements and some of it must be indefinite for a little while. A Boston radio-TV station interviewed me by phone last night and then indicated they may way to tape some interviews on the subject of Manchester's work. Thus I might stop off in Boston on the way up.

Some of the other Universities have wanted an afternoon seminar which in every case amounted to an opportunity for a group of students to ask what questions they wanted, and in a small group. I imagine these were history or government majors. In any event, anything you'd like to do along this line just go ahead and plan for.

My own recent experiences, as people become more and more aware of the subject matter, confirm your preference. It works out best if I make a few brief introductory remarks and then answer questions.

I'd appreciate it if you could make sleeping arrangements for me. They need not be elaborate. And it makes no difference to me how long the evening runs. On several campuses there were groups of special students with whom I got together after the formal meeting was over. These, again, seem to have been picked specially. I've found them stimulating. Late hours do not trouble me. I get little sleep.

Sincerely yours,

Harold Weisberg
